NO ACTION IS TAKEN AGAINST ORANGE MEN

Indications Are "Transients" Will Not Be Interfered With by City.

After a lengthy discussion at the commission meeting Tuesday afternoon as to whether or not certain persons selling oranges and other "ruits at the present time in Chattan-loga should be classified as "transient merchants" and pay transient merchants" license, a motion was made that the question be passed over for further investigation. Fack Fritta selling oranges from a box car on the Western & Atlantic-crossing, and the Orange Grove company, selling the same fruit in a Read bouse store, are the ones against whom complaint has been issued to the mayor by one; produce dealers.

The argument Tuesday afternoon was entered into chiefly by Mayor Chambliss, representing the city, and W. R. Snyder and Boyd Hargaves, representing the local produce dealers, who attended the meeting in a body. Mayor Chambliss therrestation of the law both of 1913 and later dates, passed by the legislature, was that it would not include eggs, butter, fruits and other such produce. nmission meeting Tuesday afternoon and other such produce.
Attorneys Snyder and Hargrayes in-sisted that the two dealers in quessisted that the two dealers in ques-tion were selling fruit I, wholesale quantities: that neither of them had made preparations to become perma-nent merchants of the city. They de-clared that there was every evidence that the dealers complained of had just marely come into Chattanoons to rese the basecus suring the holidays and that after this time they would 'pick up their tents and beat it." They also undertook to convinds the commission that these so-called transient merchants were selling "wind-falls," or what was termed by Lawyer Hargraves the "run-of the-mines" of the orchard. They said that the people who were paying 30 cents a dozen for the oranges in these places, were merely being fooled into believing that they were buying oranges cheaper.

They send that she so ofte who were paying 30 cents a sean the overlaying oranges cheaper.

To illustrate this point Mr. Hartline, a well-known groceryman here, exhibited nine oranges, a sample of which he had been asking 40 cents a crange sputchased by, him from oranges putchased by, him from orange of the "transient merchants." and datated that the nine oranges which were taken from a uniformly nacked box in his store weighed as much as did the twelve purchased from the out-of-town merchant. Mayor's View.

Mayor Chambliss told the attorney for the grocers that it appeared to him that they were, so to speak, trying to make a mountain out of a mole hill. That he didn't suppose the local merchants were suffering to any great extent by these orange sales. Mr. Wassman stated that no complaints had been received from the stallkeepers at the market house. Mayor Chambliss, in interpreting the law, pointed out that undoor on the cright, and the stall the stall that the would be classed under the huckster class, and would only be subject to the huckster's license. The attorneys for the producers insisted that he would be classed under the huckster class, and would only be subject to the huckster's license. The attorneys for the producers insisted that the office of the meeting as including and advertised his wares, but opened his place in the morning and closed it at hight in the same place had not been subjected to any immediate investigation.

Mayor Chambliss expressed himself at the beginning of the meeting as including the condition of the meeting as included the subject

In those good old days, long before the Eightesnth amendment threw its repulsive shadow athwart the skies of convivialism, from zenith to horizon covering every point of compass, there was a cheerful saying of greatest ourrency after nightfall, "ily you are going to be a fellow, why not be a — of a fellow, why not be a — of a fellow, with the sudden appearance on my desk of an old newspaper article, giving elaborate account of a one-time highly popular woman who used to live in Chattanooga, Among the many virtues ascribed to her was that she was the only living person whose name appears in our first city directory. I knew that was a lie, because, for instance, my own name appears there, and has from the very day of its publication. True, it did not rightfully belong there, for I was toe young to be in a city directory, but Lou L. Parham was a friend of mine, and he declared his purpose of inserting my name and letting me grow up to the honor in right here, without comment, that numbers of others who are living in Chattanooga, right now enjoyed place in that directory, and it occurred to me as very improbable that the venerable old woman in question occupied one of the places, for she was very happilly married at the time, and her husband was not the kind of man to shirk such responsibilities as answering when the directory roll was called. So I got out course but slight knowledge of our people of this day to force observation of some remarkable changes in this particular.

Some who were content with boarding houses not even then so ery prominent now own and live in homes which are among the finest in the city, in the vicinity and indeed in the state. The explanation is that large numbers of the business men at that time were young fellows who had come here to 'grow up with the country;' many of them just out of one or the other of the armies, Our one time fellow cownsman. Mst. A. H. Fettibone, said fame was to die fighting valiantly for your country and wake up next morping to fine your name spelled wrong in the first intial "!." whereas it should have been "Z". Here is a puzzle for circlus readers to study out.

As has been said there is reason to suppose that numbers of persons whose names appear in the first directory are living but have not been included in this list. It has been made up from the personal knowledge of one person, thassisted. If any are living who should have been included I will be most glad to hear from them, and I feel sure The News would be pleased to give their names in another list. It is pleasant to know what the families of some whose names were recorded in the directory, but could not be included bera are still with us, and many of them are well known, John W. Cope was a clerk for Henry Kruger, and a very popular, agreeable centleman. The list is the list and his who lived here before the Civil war, Though only a young giff at the time, she forcasw and foretold the Battle of Missionary Ridge, with some details of remarkable circumstantiality. The name of J. P. Loomis was in the list and his widow is a bright, hale woman, living in North Chaitanoogn. Two of his sons and a daughter are living. The widow of Dr. E. M. Wight is living, and is, as she has been for many years, active in good works. Two sons are also living both being among our best known men.
